

NEWEST MODEL LINOTYPE JUST INSTALLED BY ADVOCATE PUB. CO.

First Machine of the Kind to be Placed in the State of Kentucky—Receiving Many Compliments Upon Progressive Step.

The Advocate Publishing Company has just received and installed a new model 14 Linotype. Mr. Robert Chaffee, of the Mergenthaler Linotype Company, has been here erecting same for several days and now has the machine in running order.

The Advocate office has been equipped with a Linotype for some time but the present machine enables them to do work it was impossible to do on the older model—the present machine being “the latest word” in typesetting machinery. The public is invited to come in and see this machine in operation.

A self-explanatory letter from the Mergenthaler Linotype Company follows:

October 16, 1914

Advocate Publishing Company,
Mt. Sterling, Ky.

Gentlemen:

Since writing you several days ago acknowledging receipt of your order for a Model 14 Three Magazine Quick Change Linotype, it has occurred to us that you might be interested in knowing that the Advocate will be the first office in the State of Kentucky to install this new and improved multiple magazine Linotype.

You are to be congratulated upon the progressive spirit in your business methods as evidenced in this deal, and we are confident you will find this new Linotype model a highly efficient addition to your composing-room equipment.

Your judicious selection of equipment for the new Model Fourteen Linotype will enable you to greatly improve the typographical appearance of the Advocate, and the fact that you will set practically all of the paper on the machine, including the large newspaper headings, display advertising and news matter, giving your paper a new dress for every edition, should be gratifying to your subscribers and advertising patrons.

Again thanking you for the order, and wishing you continued success, we remain

Yours very truly,
MERGENTHALER LINOTYPE COMPANY,
Geo. E. Lincoln,
Manager.

He was well known in this county where he has many relatives and friends who were grieved to learn of his death. He is survived by his wife and two children, his mother, Mrs. C. O. Moberly, and two sisters, Miss Minnie Moberly and Mrs. Rezin Howell, of this city. We extend our sympathy to the stricken family. CONTEST IS NOW ON TRIAL

County Judge Chenault and Magistrates Boyd and McCormick Compose Trial Court.

The Contest Board, composed of County Judge W. O. Chenault and Magistrates F. P. Boyd and O. W. McCormick met Monday in the County Court room and proceeded to hear the contest filed by Mess. D. N. Young and others contesting the recent Local Option election held in Montgomery county. The hearing did not begin until in the afternoon, owing to the absence of Judge Ed. C. O'Rear, of Frankfort, chief counsel for the “dry” forces and the afternoon was consumed by Mr. Jno. G. Winn and Judge O'Rear in the presentation of their side of the case and an adjournment was had until the afternoon of today (Wednesday) when Judge Lewis Apperson, attorney for the “wets” will be heard.

As we go to press the result is not known, yet it is the consensus of opinion that the “drys” will win. The case will then be appealed to the Circuit Court and then to the Court of Appeals. It is also asserted on good authority that an attempt will be made to get the U. S. Courts to take jurisdiction on the constitutional question raised that the present Local Option law deprives those in the liquor business of their property without due process of law.

It is also rumored that an attempt will be made by mandamus to compel the Mayor and City Council to grant licenses for 1915 on the ground that the result of the election is not in force until the contest is finally determined by the highest court to which it can be appealed.

CHARLES DUTY DIES AFTER LONG ILLNESS

After an illness of several months Mr. Charles H. Duty, aged 43 years, died at his home in Winchester last Thursday morning about five o'clock. He had been in declining health for some time and his family and friends had despaired of his recovery.

Mr. Duty was formerly engaged in the drug business in Winchester, but recently has held a position as revenue agent. Mt. Sterling was Mr. Duty's home until about 12 years ago. He was one of the best known and most popular men of this section and has a host of friends who will regret his demise.

The deceased was a native of Mason, being born in that county and it was there he spent his childhood. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. D. D. Duty, his father being a native of Bath county while his mother was born in Cortland, N. Y.

Mr. Duty is survived by his wife, who before her marriage was Miss Lillian Curry, and one son, Mr. Curry H. Duty, of Chicago. Two sisters, and two brothers, Mrs. James Wood, of Mt. Sterling, Mrs. John Honaker, of Owingsville, and Messrs. W. S. Duty, of Winchester, and B. P. Duty, of this city.

The funeral services were held from his late residence Friday afternoon, conducted by the Rev. E. L. Southgate. The burial took place in the Winchester cemetery. Following is a list of the pall-bearers: Judge Ed. C. O'Rear, John L. Coleman, G. L. Kirkpatrick, J. Ed. Grubbs, J. W. Poynter and W. S. Massie.

BECKHAM WINS IN RACE FOR U. S. SENATE FIELDS ALSO A WINNER FOR CONGRESS

Whitman Appears Winner in New York--Ohio Goes 'Wet' By About Two to One--Governor's Race Close in Ohio, While Republican Wins for U. S. Senate in Buckeye State.

From the best information we have been able to secure Hon. J. C. W. Beckham was elected to the U. S. Senate by a large majority. The Democratic headquarters claim his election by 35,000 while the Republicans concede his election by eight

Fayette

Beckham by 325 to 350.

We cannot refrain from embracing this, the first opportunity, to congratulate the Democratic party and Mr. Beckham on the showing made in dear old Montgomery. When one considers the fact that the leaders of those who entertain different temperance views have been actively working against him ever since the primary, one is forced to conclude that he has made a race of which he ought to be proud.

Although honestly nominated and entitled to the support of all those who participated in the primary, he was slaughtered in the city of Mt. Sterling and but for the brave Democrats of the country precincts, would have lost the county.

The result bespeaks a brighter and better day politically, due to a quickened public conscience and demonstrates that an honest, capable man, with convictions and courage enough to express them, can without money, get a majority of the votes in old Kentucky for the highest office within the gift of the people of the State.

TO BEAUTIFY EYESORE

Mrs. James A. Leech, Chairman of the Kentucky Federation of Women's Clubs last week sent about 100 hardy flower plants to a member of the club here who had them placed on the vacant lot opposite the C. & O. depot. The lot has always looked very badly and we are sure the planting of the flowers will be appreciated by the entire traveling public.

TEARS VS. WAR

The women of Europe in these troublesome times of war must be well armed if the poet's ideas are correct. What is a woman's weapon? has been asked and answered in various ways. A quarter of a century ago, perhaps, there went the newspaper rounds an exquisite little triplet of stanzas, each bearing an answer to the question, and below is the way it went:

A Woman's Weapon

"What is a woman's weapon?"
I asked a charming girl;
She dropped her lashes slyly
And stroked a vagrant curl;
Then consciously she murmured—
This rosebud newly cut:
"I have a strong suspicion,
Her weapon is a pout."
"What is a woman's weapon?"
I asked a lover true;
He turned him to a maiden
With eyes of heavenly blue;
Her velvet lips were parted,
All innocent of guile,
And eagerly he answered,
"Her weapon is a smile."
"What is a woman's weapon?"
I asked a poet, then;
With sudden inspiration
He seized upon his pen:
"Oh, I could name a thousand,"
He cried with accents clear;
"But a woman's surest weapon
I grant you, is a tear."
Then, if tears are being shed
From the weeping eyes and wounded Hearts of troubled women of these countries in proportion to the blood that flows the gaping veins of the fallen soldiers, surely peace white-winged, must soon come, with her mission of love and mercy.
"Oh peace! thou source and soul of social life;
Beneath whose calm, inspiring influence
Science, his view enlarges, Art re-fines, And swelling Commerce opens all her ports;
Blest be the man divine who gave us thee."

"Good news travels fast," and the back back sufferers in Mt. Sterling are glad to learn where relief may be found. Many a lame, weak and aching back is bad no more, thanks to Doan's Kidney Pills. Our citizens are telling the good news of their experience with this tested remedy. Here is an example worth reading:

"One of the family suffered from pains in the back and kidneys and had other symptoms of kidney complaint," says Mrs. C. C. Schooler, of 4 Jamison St., Mt. Sterling, Ky. "He used Doan's Kidney Pills, procured at Duerson's Drug Store, and they made him strong and well."

TUBERCULOSIS DAY NOV. 29.

President Wilson has expressed his approval of the Fifth National Tuberculosis Day in the week of Nov. 29. This movement is not for the purpose of raising funds, but simply to bring to the attention of all the people of the country the essential facts concerning the treatment and prevention of tuberculosis.

Gov. James B. McCreary, President of the Kentucky Tuberculosis Commission, and all of the Commissioners, hope that the day may be widely observed in all the churches and schools of the State, since the observance of the day is commended by leading ministers, and educators and public men everywhere. Kentucky, with the highest death rate from tuberculosis in the country, with 4682 deaths last year, and with probably 24,000 active cases in the State, certainly general education about this essentially curable and preventable disease.

Clergymen and others may secure literature for the preparation of addresses or for general distribution from local anti-tuberculosis societies, or from the Kentucky Tuberculosis Commission, Frankfort.

YUSSIF HUSSANE TO MEET MORT HENDERSON HERE

Yussif Hussane, the Terrible Turk, the actual world's champion wrestler, will meet Mort Henderson, of Rochester, N. Y., the reputed Irish champion, in Mt. Sterling on the night of Nov. 5th. Neither Hussane or Henderson has ever appeared in this city, but they will give the fans a real run for their money.

Hussane defeated Dr. B. F. Roller, one of Mt. Sterling's favorites, at Lexington a week ago, taking the first fall in sixty minutes and the second in thirteen. Hussane toyed with Roller and "beat him on the bit." The Turk is the only man in the world today who has a chance to defeat Stanislaus Zbyszko, the powerful Pole, whom he wrestled a two hours and three quarters draw in Omaha, Neb. last spring. He has defeated practically every American wrestler of class, and claims to be the champion today.

Hussane tips the beam at 195 pounds. He is the "greatest little big man" in the business. Hussane is managed by Jack Curley, one of the leading sporting promoters in the country, who will accompany him to Mt. Sterling. Curley also manages Jess Willard, the white hope, who is matched to fight Jack Johnson for the prize ring championship. He also has Jim Flynn, the Pueblo fireman, and many other noted athletes in his "stable."

Henderson is a husky chap, weighing 215 pounds, and is said to be able to give a good account of himself with the topnotchers. He has met and defeated some of the best men in the game, and he is sure to make the Turk travel some to beat him.

The match will be staged at the Tabb Opera House Thursday night, November 5th. Good preliminaries have been arranged, and the red letter wrestling night in Mt. Sterling appears assured.

PREPARING FOR THE INTERNATIONAL

Getting ready for the International Live Stock Exposition, held this year from November 28th to December 5th, is a task of vast proportions of which the public has little conception. Each year it has been the policy of the management to provide additional facilities for exhibitors and enlarge accommodation for visitors. This work involves a heavy outlay annually and its only possible reward is public recognition. Steadily increasing attendance and growing magnitude of the display of live stock demonstrates the sagacity of the management in this respect.

This year the expanding disposition of the enterprise has necessitated material increase in the show area. The historic Dexter Park locality, noted half a century back as the greatest speed track in the world, is to be utilized. A strong force of men is engaged in the conversion process which will be completed a month hence. These improvements and enlargements mean added space for exhibitors and comfort for visitors.

Compared with facilities afforded at the first "International" the housing of that institution this year will be incomparably superior. Hundreds of thousands of dollars have been expended on permanent quarters and although at no period of its career has the exposition lacked accommodation, 1914 provision in this respect will be considerably in anticipation of actual requirement.

POMEROY RATS LIVED HIGH

Had Royal Feed on Thousand-Dollar Public Building Bond Belonging to Ohio Bank.

That Cuyahoga county public building $1,000 bonds are good rat food was evidenced by a long envelope full of the much gnawed remains of one of these bonds brought to the county commissioners' office by a messenger from the First National bank.

The small pieces showed the bond was issued February 1, 1902, bore the serial number 768, maturing August 1, 1917, and that the 1914 coupon is still out.

The messenger explained the mutilated bond was received by the First National bank in Cleveland from the Pomeroy National bank at Pomeroy, O., with the information that rats had gnawed through a trunk where the bond had been kept and didn't stop until they had almost devoured the entire bond.

After a conference, County Commissioner Metzger said the owner of the bond either would be furnished a duplicate or another bond if the Pomeroy citizen will bear the expense.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

HEART BEAT AFTER DEATH

Switchman's Pulsation Reported to Have Continued Long After Respiration Had Ceased.

Chicago medical circles were interested in the report of an interne in one of the largest hospitals in the city that the heart of a patient who died in his ward had continued pulsation two hours and forty minutes after the man's respiration had ceased. The report was made by Dr. L. G. Morrill of the staff of St. Luke's hospital.

The patient was George Fitch, fifty-two years old, a switchman, who had been caught between two freight cars. His chest was crushed. He was operated on and died the night of July 31. According to Doctor Morrill's report, breath stopped at midnight. Doctor Morrill remained by the man's side and discovered that his heart continued to beat. It did not cease until 2:40 o'clock in the morning, he declared, and, meanwhile, by every test the man's lungs were lifeless.

Physicians declared the case of extreme interest, and requested Doctor Morrill to elaborate his official report.

WERE NOT POLICY SLIPS.

Slips of paper inscribed with Chinese characters were produced before Magistrate Herbert, in the Tombs police court, recently, when Lee Fung of 5 Mott street was arraigned for having policy slips in his possession. Detectives said that when they entered Lee's room he began to tear up the slips. Jim Gum, who acted as interpreter, read the slips in court.

"Ten pounds of prunes," he read. "Fifteen pounds of rice, five pounds of tea—"

"That's enough," said Magistrate Herbert. "What was this place—a boarding house?"

Lee Fung nodded his head eagerly, and was immediately discharged.—New York Tribune.

Joints Stiff From Rheumatism--Hot Springs Failed to Cure--Andes Medicines Did the Work

Montgomery, Ala., June 10, 1913.

Hot Springs, Ark., has a world-wide reputation as the mecca for the cure of all forms of rheumatism. Invalids are carried there on stretchers, in rolling chairs. Every train brings some who are drawn and joints have become stiff and they come to bathe in the health-giving waters, with hopes of being restored to their normal health again. People of all walks of life are to be found here, all seeking the coveted goal. Health the main-spring of all good and great things.

However these health-giving waters, with their wonderful fame as to their curative powers, sometimes fail to give the sufferers any relief whatever. This is proven from the statement of Mr. J. D. Bershies, living corner of Mildred and Mobile streets, who has been a sufferer from rheumatism of the very worst form for the past twelve years. His ankles were perfectly stiff and he dragged his feet along, and the pains during the damp, cloudy weather were intense.

He visited Hot Springs with hopes of finding relief from this trouble, but it failed to give back the use of the ankles. Mr. Bershies called at the Andes salesroom yesterday to make a purchase of the Great Medicine. He said: "Your remedies have done me more good than my trip to Hot Springs. Look how I can bend my ankles. It is the best use I have had of them in twelve years and I expect to continue to use the Medicine as I believe I will be entirely cured. Rheumatism is caused from kidney trouble. Andes' Great Prescription acts on the kidneys, removes all uric acid from the blood and cures permanently. The Great Oil is used externally. If the directions are followed, these two wonderful medicines will cure any case of rheumatism. Andes' Prescription has done more real good for sufferers from catarrh, indigestion, stomach, liver, kidney, bladder diseases, blood troubles, weak, nervous, all run down system and tired, all-gone feelings, than any medicine ever sold in Alabama. Price, Andes' Great Prescription, $1.00 per bottle; 3 for $2.50; 6 for $5.00.

Andes' Oil, the modern wonder for restoring the hearing, for stiff and drawn joints, rheumatism of any kind sprains, strains, weak back, lumbago, in fact pains or aches in any part of the body will yield in three minutes to this wonderful oil. Price 50 cents; 3 for $1.25. An enormous demand is being made for these wonderful medicines, and many are loud in the praise of the good it is doing them. Call on the Mt. Sterling Drug Co., today and purchase a bottle of these medicines.

Bertha Kreighoff in "A Pair of Sixes," Tabb Opera House Wednesday night, Nov. 4th.

"A PAIR OF SIXES"

The Tabb Theatre offers tonight, (Wednesday), H. H. Frazee's international comedy hit, "A Pair of Sixes." This unusual and novel comedy, which ran for nearly a year on Broadway at the Longacre Theatre, was acknowledged by New York City critics to be something new in farce, and although these blase gentlemen of the press do not usually indulge in hyperbole, the consensus of their opinion seemed to be that not since the days of the lamented Chas. H. Hoyt had anything so agreeable in the way of farce been offered the Metropolitan show goer. The tremendous success which has greeted the comedy wherever it has appeared has proven them exacted right in their opinions. The story is unusual and full of satire and humor of the highest class and the logical plot is sufficiently surprising in the climaxes of the situations involved to command the eager and undivided attention of the audience throughout the action of the piece. "A Pair of Sixes" sets forth the troubles of two partners in the pill business whose natures are so antagonistic that they are absolutely unable to get along together. Finally so heated do their daily altercations become that they call in their lawyer to settle their partnership. He finds this to be an impossible task as neither of the partners will sell his interest to the other. He finally hits on an idea which he induces the belligerents to accept and so novel does it prove that it not only furnishes more laughs than comedy generally affords but provides the name for the piece as well.

MOTHERS OF DELICATE CHILDREN

Should Read the Following Letter—Mrs. Slack's Story About Her Child's Recovery Is Entirely Reliable.

Palmyra, Pa.—"Three years ago my little girl had black measles which left her with a chronic cough and so awfully thin you could count all her ribs, and she coughed so much she had no appetite. "Nothing we gave her seemed to help her at all until one day Mrs. Neibert told me how much good Vinol had done her little girl, so I decided to try it for my little one, and it has done her so much good she is hungry all the time, her cough is gone, she is stouter and more healthy in color and this is the first winter she has been able to play out in the snow, coasting and snow-balling without any ill effects."—Mrs. ALFRED SLACK, Palmyra, Pa.

We know Vinol will build up your little ones and make them healthy, strong and robust, therefore we ask parents of every frail and sickly child in this vicinity to try a bottle of Vinol, our delicious cod liver and iron tonic without oil.

If we can induce you to try a bottle of Vinol as a body-builder and strength-giver for your child, and you do not find it is all we claim, we will return your money on demand.

HER SECRET

We occasionally meet a woman whose age is as beautiful as the bloom of youth. We wonder how it has come about—what her secret is.

Here are a few of the reasons.

She knew how to forget disagreeable things.

She kept her nerves well in hand and inflicted them on no one.

She mastered the art of saying pleasant things.

She did not expect too much from her friends.

She made whatever work came to her congenial.

She retained her illusions and did not believe all the world wicked and unkind.

She relieved the miserable and sympathized with the sorrowful.

She never forgot that kind words and a smile cost nothing, but are priceless treasures to the discouraged.

She did unto others as she would be done by.

She never missed an opportunity to tell her friends and neighbors to subscribe for this paper and impress them that it is worth many times the subscription price.

SHORTAGE OF HORSES.

Heavy purchase by British and French agents of horses for war use is presenting a serious problem to the Quartermaster's Department of the United States army and it is feared that it will soon be impossible to obtain enough horses for its own purposes during the present year. Already the young horses bought for the remount stations cost seventeen dollars per head more than last year. These animals are too young to be used at once and their sales do not reflect the real increase of price for cavalry horses which already stands $20 per head over last year's rates.

COUNTY GETS MORE MONEY.

County Attorney E. W. Senff has just collected and paid into the County Treasury the sum of $900, on the old Rail Road debt of Montgomery County vs. Menefee County. This sum makes a total of $5036.37 collected to date and there is yet due about $1000. As fast as the money is collected it is applied upon the old interest bearing bonds.

Be Optimistic.

Tell a healthy man day after day that he is looking badly and after awhile he will believe he is sick and will be sick. In the same way if everybody keeps saying that business is going to the dogs it will go there all right. On the other hand preach optimism and practice it and business will improve right along in spite of the war.

There's nothing the matter with the United States. It is true that we have lost a big slice of our export trade but the bulk of our business does not come from foreign markets, but from our home market. A rich country like ours with a hundred million population can furnish enough demand to absorb all of our manufactured and agricultural products. We have been buying abroad many millions of dollars worth of goods that ought to be made here and will be made here if our manufacturers are encouraged to produce them.

Therefore let us cheer up. If the war has directly interfered with our business let us discover ways and means to extend it to new fields or readjust it to the new conditions. Let us push goods "Made in America" and down forever the fetish that foreign made products are better than those made in the United States of America.—The Editor and Publisher.

GUILTY OF MANSLAUGHTER

In the case of the Commonwealth against Marion Myers for the killing of Joe Henry Sorrell at Farmers on December 22, 1912, the jury at Morehead Friday returned a verdict finding the defendant guilty of voluntary manslaughter. Sentence was not pronounced as W. A. Young, counsel for the defense announced he would file motion for a new trial. The case has been repeatedly put off and was finally called Thursday morning, with Special Judge C. D. Newell, of Maysville, on the bench. The plea was self defense. On Sunday night, December 22, the Acting Marshal, according to the evidence, Marion Myers, shot and instantly killed Joe Henry Sorrell, the Ex-Marshal of the town of Farmers. Sorrell had been put out of office and the two men were not on speaking terms.

On Friday, October 30th, the High School foot ball team journeyed to Paris, where they were defeated by the High School eleven of that city by the score of 18 to 0; notwithstanding the score, the game was hard fought. Many times Mt. Sterling was in the enemies territory and once in the second quarter after cutting the enemies line to pieces and with only four or five yards to go and first down, time was called and all counted for naught. Oldham of the locals, played an especially good game at guard and forced Paris to send in new men as many as three times. Paris gained most ground by end runs after finding she could do nothing with the local line. Mt. Sterling as in the previous game found the enemies line weak.

THE COMBINATION DANCES

By ODGERS T. GURNEE

Illustrated With Specially Posed Photographs

THE hunt for new steps and new rhythm has brought forth a number of striking dances that combine the basic principles of two or three of the older figures.

In some of these the tempo of the music changes to fit the dance, but in the later and more complete a new and distinct tempo is carried throughout, and the steps are made to fit the melody.

The leading instructors in this country have been the pioneers in this matter, and the Rowley Downs "moderation," Vernon Castle's "half and half" and the "pousse cafe" of Miss Winn and Mr. Evans are being tried on nearly every dancing floor in New York, Philadelphia, Boston and possibly Chicago.

Among the earliest ones were Joan Sawyer's "three in one" and "aeroplane waltz." These were both very pretty, but had one fault in that the tempo of the music was changed at frequent intervals to fit the different styles of figures.

In the recent combinations, however, the action is unbroken throughout. Take the "moderation," for instance. This has a special melody in seven-quarter time and combines the steps of the waltz and tango.

On the same general principle is the "half and half," originated by Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Castle. This, too, has a melody all its own in five-quarter time and combines the steps of the waltz and one step.

Word comes from Paris that a new dance known as "la danse hypnotique" has been introduced there with great success. It is said to be very difficult and the highest form attainable in scientific dancing. The names of the figures tend to bear out this statement.

The first is "tierats," a suggestion of catalepsy, and then "the hypnotic step." Then comes "lethargy." The last figure of all is "coma."

In dancing the "moderation" and the "half and half" there are no new steps to be learned. The difference is all with the tempo. Any music seven-quarter or five-quarter time is suitable, and once you have mastered the swing of the music it will be a simple matter to dance them.

Of course it is possible to devise steps or change some of the old ones to fit a beat in the new motif; but, as a rule, the standardized steps go best.

In this regard it is well to say a word in favor of the effort to standardize dancing steps.

Miss Flora Vorhees, leader in the movement, says:

"The new dances must be standardized before they can become actually the expression of the age. But the dancers rush with the coolness of a driver in an automobile race to ballroom or dance hall, where they frolic in the joy of living, but few of them move with consciousness of accuracy. They dance because the spirit of the dance is in them, but they do not know how or what they dance. They say they are tangoing or one stepping when they do not know the steps of either the tango or the one step. In spite of their description of the dance,

THE VERNON CASTLES IN A STEP FROM THE "HALF AND HALF."

If a man from Pittsburgh tried to tango with a maid from New York, their first attempt would probably be some sort of a "confusion caper," or if the couple chanced to keep the same step for a minute or two their dance would be a "coincidence crawl."

The age is one of frenzy, reduced to a formula, deliberation galvanized by giddiness, and the new dances are in emphatic harmony with all we do. They are executed with studied abandon. They are wild and free within the limit of intention—that is, they are such inherently and fundamentally. They are at present uncertain and confused.

A Pose From the Pousse Cafe

Posed by Miss Wilma Winn and Mr. Everett Evans.

ONE of the most striking of the new combination dances is the "pousse cafe." It was devised by Miss Winn and Mr. Evans and has just a little bit of everything in it. The illustration shows a jumpless "pousse step," which is one of the features of the dance. This can also be done to the Maxixe if the jump proves too difficult.

MENAGERIE STILL WITH HIM

Second Wreck Saw Every Reason for Believing Story Told by the First Wreck.

Apocryph of the "dryness" into which West Virginia has entered by a prohibition majority of 90,000 H. L. Kirk, the mayor of Wheeling, said:

"Well, for the next four years, at any rate, you'll hear no such horrible dialogues in our West Virginia barrooms as a man heard recently in Parkersburg.

"This man saw two thin, pale, nervous wrecks standing side by side tossing off whiskeys one after another feverishly.

"The first wreck, in the interval between his ninth and tenth whiskey, wiped his mouth on the back of his thin hand and said:

"I'm just up out of a sick bed. I've been awful sick. Snakes and pink toads and green monkeys, day and night, crawled all over me."

"The second wreck started. With a frown he regarded the first wreck intently. Then he shuddered and drew back.

"Why, man," he said, "they're crawling all over you now!"—New York Herald.

Mountaineer, With No Prospects of Using Marriage License, Wanted His Money Back.

"Here's a license I done got in this here court 24 years ago, and I don't seem to have nary a chanst to ever use it, so I reckoned it best to bring it back and get the money I paid you uns for it."

This speech greeted the clerk in the marriage license office in the courthouse at Williamson, W. Va., shortly after a rugged mountaineer had entered and asked for the "feller that fixes up the marriage papers."

"You see," he said, "me and Euphemia always meant to get married, but she was so consarned contrary-like that she never was ready to have the parson tie the knot when I was."

"I 'lowed that I could worry along a while with Euphemia in her tantrums, but after 24 years I got tired and told her either we uns 'ud get married or we wouldn't."

"Euphemia 'lowed we wouldn't; so I calkerlate we won't."

NO MORE CARICATURE.

Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, during his recent visit to New York, said to a New York reporter:

"English authors nowadays sell better in America, as a rule, than at home. A sale of 20,000 volumes is extraordinary at home, but here a sale of 100,000 is hardly extraordinary."

"One consequence of this fact is the disappearance from English fiction of the American girl caricature. The American girl in English fiction today is, if anything, over-flattered. But in the English fiction of yesterday the American girl was of the type that says:

"Gee, pop, hop inter a b'led shirt. Thar goes the hash hammer."

DEAD IN EARNEST.

The suffrage ladies are asked to put up their jewelry so that it can be turned into money to help the cause, and, according to reports there will be a pretty general response. When a woman can make up her mind to do a thing like that it can be put down as certain that she is dead in earnest.—Philadelphia Press.

NOT A PLUNGER.

"I've seen better days, mum," said the tramp at the door. "I once did business in Wall street."

"You surprise me," said the sympathetic housewife. "Did you deal in stocks and bonds?"

"No, mum. Pencils wuz me line."

THE LACK.

"The poor organ-man over there is in grinding need."

"Not of food, surely!"

"No; of some new tunes."

WAR NEWS IN BRIEF

Turkey

The Grand Vizier of Turkey has apologized on behalf of his Government for the warlike operations of the Turkish fleet in the Black Sea, but it is stated in London and Bordeaux dispatches that the Porte will have to go very much further before the Powers of the Triple Entente will agree to resume friendly relations, and in this connection repatriation for the Black Sea raid and dismissal of all German officers in the Turkish army and navy are mentioned. The Ambassadors of France, Russia and Great Britain have left Constantinople. A report comes from Constantinople of the seizure of another Russian vessel, and also that Bulgaria had begun to mobilize her second line of troops.

France

The entire North Sea has been declared a military area and merchant vessels entering will be exposed to gravest dangers. Between the North Sea and the Oise the attacks of the Germans have become less violent, according to the French report. The Allies claim advances south of Dixmude.

Russia

The General Staff of the Russian army reports that attacks of the German troops in Eastern Prussia have been repulsed, and that beyond the Vistula its troops continue the offensive unopposed, except in the region of Opatow, where the Austrians resisted with considerable forces.

England

By the release of the American tanker Platuria, Great Britain has conceded the right of United States vessels carrying oil to land their cargoes in Danish ports.

Germany

The Berlin report says the Germans have gained ground around Ypres. Fighting on the German north-western flank is described as savage in character.

It is thought the time has arrived when the German cruiser in Honolulu harbor for repairs will have to run the gauntlet of Japanese warships awaiting outside the harbor or be interned until the close of the war.

GOOD ROADS

Every phase of the road question is discussed and broadly covered. Details of expenditures that are being made by the sixteen Southern States show that the South is now annually putting out over $50,000,000 in the building and maintenance of roads without counting its expenditure on street improvements in towns and cities. The work that is being done in every State is covered by letters from the Governors or from the Highway Commissioners, or other authorities who are hand-road building materials, including the road question in the various States. Experts discuss various sand-clay, brick, cement, macadam and all other phases of road work.

In the opening editorial outlining its reasons for the work which it has been doing for years in behalf of good the Manufacturers Record says:

Reader! Are you a road engineer, a road builder, a road supervisor, or are you a county or town official charged with responsibilities of road and street building or maintenance?

Are you a maker or a seller of road machinery equipment, or are you, as a taxpayer, encouraging the building of good roads?

If to any one of these questions you can answer, I am, then rejoice that you are numbered among those whose work is more than material in its scope. Perchance you think only of the material side of it. If so, look to the higher side and idealize your work as part of a great campaign for human advancement; a campaign for extending the highest benefits of civilization, and the moral, religious and educational life of a nation. Yours is more than a business. It is a vocation, a calling that should in its wide scope include in your thought the idealism of the work as well as the routine of the business.

It is difficult to measure the good accomplished by the building of good roads or to catalogue their advantages. It is equally difficult to enumerate the disadvantages which necessarily inure to bad roads. The good road opens to the country and to the city possibilities for larger business and for larger profits on the business done. It increases the value of all adjacent land; but it does this by increasing the net profits of farming or of business carried on these adjacent lands. The farmer who lives on a mud road is hampered in summer and in winter. The burden of hauling to and from the farm costs him many times more than all the freight rate that he pays the railroads. If one-tenth of the energy that has been expended in the last ten years in trying to regulate railroads and reduce freight rates had been given to the betterment of the highways of the country, infinitely larger results would have been achieved for the good of everybody.

The railroad freight rate is a small item to the farmer as compared with that heavy burden he bears when he hauls the product of his farm over a mud road, or brings back to the farm the various things—whether they be dry-goods, or groceries, or lumber—that he buys in the neighboring town or city. Not only is his ability to do business to profit lessened by bad roads and broadened by good roads, but in the former case his family is shut up for much of the year and deprived of the advantages of social and educational life; while the man who lives on a good road gives to his family the advantages of religious and educational and social facilities not possible to those who live where wheels are mired to the hub in winter time, or where intolerable dust exists in summer.

THE OUTCASTS OF POKER FLAT

By BRET HARTE

BRET HARTE

Twenty-four famous authors were asked recently to name the best short story in the English language. Richard Harding Davis and Wallace Irwin named "The Outcasts of Poker Flat," by Bret Harte, whose complete works are published by the Houghton-Mifflin Company.

RICHARD HARDING DAVIS

PART I.

AS Mr. John Oakhurst, gambler, stepped into the main street of Poker Flat on the morning of the 23d of November, 1850, he was conscious of a change in its moral atmosphere since the preceding night. Two or three men, conversing earnestly together, ceased as he approached and exchanged significant glances. There was a Sabbath lull in the air, which, in a settlement unused to Sabbath influences, looked ominous.

Mr. Oakhurst's calm, handsome face betrayed small concern in these indications. Whether he was conscious of any predisposing cause was another question. "I reckon they're after somebody," he reflected, "likely it's me." He returned to his pocket the handkerchief with which he had been whipping away the red dust of Poker Flat from his neat boots and quietly discharged his mind of any further conjecture.

In point of fact, Poker Flat was "after somebody." It had lately suffered the loss of several thousand dollars, two valuable horses and a prominent citizen. It was experiencing a spasm of virtuous reaction, quite as lawless and ungovernable as any of the acts that had provoked it. A secret committee had determined to rid the town of all improper persons. This was done permanently in regard to two men who were then hanging from the boughs of a sycamore in the gulch and temporarily in the banishment of certain other objectionable characters. I regret to say that some of these were ladies. It is but due to the sex, however, to state that their impropriety was professional and it was only in such easily established standards of evil that Poker Flat ventured to sit in judgment.

Mr. Oakhurst was right in supposing that he was included in this category. A few of the committee had urged hanging him as a possible example, and a sure method of reimbursing themselves from his pockets of the sums he had won for them. "It's agin justice," said Jim Wheeler, "to let this yer young man from Roaring Camp—an entire stranger—carry away our money." But a crude sentiment of equity residing in the breasts of those who had been fortunate enough to win from Mr. Oakhurst overruled this narrower local prejudice.

Mr. Oakhurst received his sentence with philosophic calmness, none the less coolly that he was aware of the hesitation of his judges. He was too much of a gambler not to accept fate. With him life was at best an uncertain game, and he recognized the usual percentage in favor of the dealer.

A body of armed men accompanied the deported wickedness of Poker Flat to the outskirts of the settlement. Besides Mr. Oakhurst, who was known to be a coolly desperate man and for whose intimidation the armed escort was intended, the expropriated party consisted of a young woman familiarly known as "The Duchess," another, who had won the title of "Mother Shipton," and "Uncle Billy," a suspected sluice robber and confirmed drunkard. The cavalcade provoked no comments from the spectators, nor was any word uttered by the escort. Only when the gulch which marked the uttermost limit of Poker Flat was reached the leader spoke briefly and to the point. The exiles were forbidden to return at the peril of their lives.

As the escort disappeared their pent up feelings found vent in a few hysterical tears from the Duchess, some bad language from Mother Shipton and a Parrilian volley of expletives from Uncle Billy. The philosophic Oakhurst alone remained silent. He listened calmly to Mother Shipton's desire to cut somebody's heart out, to the repeated statements of the Duchess that she would die in the road and to the alarming outcries that seemed to be bumped out of Uncle Billy as he rode forward. With the easy good humor characteristic of his class he insisted upon exchanging his own riding horse, Five Spot, for the sorry mule which the Duchess rode. But even this act did not draw the party into any closer sympathy. The young woman readjusted her somewhat dragged plumes with a feeble, faded coquetry. Mother Shipton eyed the possessor of Five Spot with malevolence, and Uncle Billy included the whole party in one sweeping anathema.

The road to Sandy Bar—a camp that not having as yet experienced the regenerating influences of Poker Flat, consequently seemed to offer some invitation to the emigrants—lay over a steep mountain range. It was distant a day's severe travel. In that advanced season the party soon passed out of the moist, temperate regions of the foothills into the dry, cold, bracing air of the Sierras. The trail was narrow and difficult. At noon the Duchess, rolling out of her saddle upon the ground, declared her intention of going no farther, and the party halted.

The spot was singularly wild and impressive. A wooded amphitheater surrounded on three sides by precipitous cliffs of naked granite sloped gently toward the crest of another precipice that overlooked the valley. It was undoubtedly the most suitable spot for a camp had camping been advisable. But Mr. Oakhurst knew that scarcely half the journey to Sandy Bar was accomplished and the party were not equipped or provisioned for delay. This fact he pointed out to his companions curtly, with a philosophic commentary on the folly of "throwing up their hands before the game was played out." But they were furnished with liquor, which in this emergency stood them in place of food, fuel, rest and prescience. In spite of his remonstrances it was not long before they were more or less under its influence. Uncle Billy passed rapidly from a bellicose state into one of stupor, the Duchess became maudlin and Mother Shipton snored. Mr. Oakhurst alone remained erect, leaning against a rock calmly surveying them.

Mr. Oakhurst did not drink. It interfered with a profession which required coolness, impassiveness and presence of mind and, in his own language, he "couldn't afford it." As he gazed at his recumbent fellow exiles the loneliness begotten of his parish trade, his habits of life, his very vices for the first time seriously oppressed him. He bestirred himself in dusting his black clothes, washing his hands and face and other acts characteristic of his studiously neat habits, and for the moment forgot his annoyance. The thought of deserting his weaker and more pitiable companions never perhaps occurred to him. Yet he could not help feeling the want of that excitement which, singularly enough, was most conducive to that calm equilibrium for which he was notorious. He looked at the gloomy walls that rose 1,000 feet sheer above the circling pines around him, at the sky, ominously clouded; at the valley below, already deepening in shadow. And, doing so, suddenly he heard his own name called.

A horseman slowly ascended the trail. In the fresh, open face of the newcomer Mr. Oakhurst recognized Tom Simson, otherwise known as "the Innocent" of Sandy Bar. He had met him some months before over a "little game," and had, with perfect equanimity, won the entire fortune amounting to some $400 of that glib youth. After the game was finished, Mr. Oakhurst drew the youthful speculator behind the door and thus addressed him: "Tommy, you're a good little man, but you can't gamble worth a cent. Don't try it over again." He then handed him his money bag and pushed him gently from the room, and so made a devoted slave of Tom Simson.

There was a remembrance of this in his boyish and enthusiastic greeting of Mr. Oakhurst. He had started, he said, to go to Poker Flat to seek his fortune. "Alone?" No, not exactly alone. In fact (a giggle), he had run away with Piney Woods. Didn't Mr. Oakhurst remember Piney? She that used to wait on the table at the Temperance House? They had been engaged a long time, but old Jake Woods had objected, and so they had run away and were going to Poker Flat to be married, and here they were. And they were tired out, and how lucky it was they had found a place to camp and company. All this the Innocent delivered rapidly, while Piney, a stout, comely damsel of fifteen, emerged from behind the pine tree, where she had been blushing unseen, and rode to the side of her lover.

Mr. Oakhurst seldom troubled himself with sentiment, still less with propriety, but he had a vague idea that the situation was not fortunate. He retained, however, his presence of mind sufficiently to kick Uncle Billy, who was about to say something, and Uncle Billy was sober enough to recognize in Mr. Oakhurst's kick a superior power that would not bear trifling. He then endeavored to dissuade Tom Simson from delaying further, but in vain. He even pointed out the fact that there was no provision, nor means of making a camp. But, unluckily, the Innocent met this objection by assuring the party that he was provided with an extra mule loaded with provisions and by the discovery of a rude attempt at a lighthouse near the trail. "Piney can stay with Mrs. Oakhurst," said the Innocent, pointing to the Duchess, "and I can shift for myself."

Nothing but Mr. Oakhurst's admonishing foot saved Uncle Billy from bursting into a roar of laughter. As it was, he felt compelled to retire up the canyon until he could recover his gravity. There he confided the joke to the tall pine trees, with many slaps of his leg, contortions of his face and the usual profanity. But when he returned to the party he found them seated by a fire for the air had grown strangely chill and the sky overcast—in apparently amicable conversation. Piney was actually talking in an impulsive, girlish fashion to the Duchess, who was listening with an interest and animation she had not shown for many days. The Innocent was holding forth, apparently with equal effect, to Mr. Oakhurst and Mother Shipton, who was actually relaxing into amiability. "Is this yer a d-d picnic?" said Uncle Billy, with inward scorn, as he surveyed the sylvan group, the glancing firelight and the tethered animals in the foreground. Suddenly an idea mingled with the alcoholic fumes that disturbed his brain. It was apparently of a jocular nature, for he felt impelled to slap his leg again and cram his fist into his mouth.

As the shadows crept slowly up the mountain a slight breeze rocked the tops of the pine trees and moaned through their long and gloomy aisles. The ruined cabin, patched and covered with pine boughs, was set apart for the ladies. As the lovers parted they unaffectedly exchanged a kiss, so honest and sincere that it might have been heard above the swaying pines. The frail Duchess and the malevolent Mother Shipton were probably too stunned to remark upon this last evidence of simplicity, and so turned without a word to the hut. The fire was replenished, the men lay down before the door and in a few minutes were asleep.

Mr. Oakhurst was a light sleeper. Toward morning he awoke numb and cold. As he stirred the dying fire the wind, which was now blowing strongly, brought to his cheek that which caused the blood to leave it—snow!

He started to his feet with the intention of awakening the sleepers, for there was no time to lose. But, turning to where Uncle Billy had been lying, he found him gone. A suspicion leaped to his brain and a curse to his lips. He ran to the spot where the mules had been tethered. They were no longer there. The tracks were already rapidly disappearing in the snow.

The momentary excitement brought Mr. Oakhurst back to the fire with his usual calm. He did not wake the sleepers. The Innocent slumbered peacefully, with a smile on his good humored, freckled face; the virgin Piney slept beside her frailer sisters as sweetly as though attended by celestial guardians, and Mr. Oakhurst, drawing his blanket over his shoulders, stroked his mustache and waited for the dawn. It came slowly in a whirlwind of snowflakes that dazzled and confused the eye. What could be seen of the landscape appeared magically changed. He looked over the valley and summed up the present and future in two words—"snowed in!"

A careful inventory of the provisions, which fortunately for the party, had been stored within the hut and so escaped the felonious fingers of Uncle Billy, disclosed the fact that with care and prudence they might last ten days longer. "That is," said Mr. Oakhurst sotto voce to the Innocent, "if you're willing to board us. If you ain't—and perhaps you'd better not—you can wait till Uncle Billy gets back with provisions." For some occult reason Mr. Oakhurst could not bring himself to disclose Uncle Billy's rascality and so offered the hypothesis that he had wandered from the camp and had accidentally stampeded the animals. He dropped a warning to the Duchess and Mother Shipton, who, of course, knew the facts of their associate's defection. "They'll find out the truth about us all when they find out anything," he added significantly, "and there's no good frightening them now."

Tom Simson not only put all his worldly store at the disposal of Mr. Oakhurst, but seemed to enjoy the prospect of their enforced seclusion. "We'll have a good camp for a week, and then the snow'll melt, and we'll all go back together." The cheerful gaiety of the young man and Mr. Oakhurst's calm infected the others. The Innocent, with the aid of pine boughs, extemporized a thatch for the roofless cabin, and the Duchess directed Piney in the rearrangement of the interior with a taste and tact that opened the blue eyes of that provincial maiden to their fullest extent. "I reckon now you're used to fine things at Poker Flat," said Piney. The Duchess turned away sharply to conceal something that reddened her cheeks through its professional tint, and Mother Shipton requested Piney not to "chatter." But when Mr. Oakhurst returned from a weary search for the trail he heard the sound of happy laughter echoed from the rocks. He stopped in some alarm, and his thoughts first naturally reverted to the whisky, which he had prudently cached. "And yet it don't seem to sound like whisky," said the gambler. It was not until he caught sight of the blazing fire through the still blinding storm and the group around it that he settled to the conviction that it was "square fun."

PART II.

WHETHER Mr. Oakhurst had cached his cards with the whisky as something debarred the free access of the community I cannot say. It was certain that, in Mother Shipton's words, he "didn't say cards once" during that evening. Happily the time was beguiled by an accorded produced somewhat ostentatiously by Tom Simson from his pack. Notwithstanding some difficulties attending the manipulation of this instrument, Piney Woods managed to pluck several reluctant melodies from its keys, to the accompaniment of the Innocent on a pair of bone castanets. But the crowning festivity of the evening was reached in a rude camp meeting hymn, which the lovers, joining hands, sang with great earnestness and vociferation. I fear that a certain defiant tone and Covenanters' swing to its chorus, rather than any devotional quality, caused it speedily to infect the others, who at last joined in the refrain:

I'm proud to live in the service of the Lord,
And I'm bound to die in his army.

The pines rocked, the storm eddied and whirled above the miserable group and the flames of their altar leaped heavenward, as if in token of the vow.

At midnight the storm abated, the rolling clouds parted and the stars glittered keenly above the sleeping camp. Mr. Oakhurst, whose professional habits had enabled him to live on the smallest possible amount of sleep, in dividing the watch with Tom Simson, somehow managed to take upon himself the greater part of that duty. He excused himself to the Innocent by saying that he had "often been a week without sleep." "Doing what?" asked Tom. "Poker!" replied Oakhurst sententiously. "When a man gets a streak of luck—nigger luck—he don't get tired. The luck gives in first. Luck," continued the gambler reflectively, "is a mighty queer thing. All you know about it for certain is that it's bound to change. And it's finding out when it's going to change that makes you. We've had a streak of bad luck since we left Poker Flat—you come along and, slap, you get into it too. If you can hold your cards right along you're all right. For," added the gambler, with cheerful irrelevance, "I'm proud to live in the service of the Lord."

And I'm bound to die in his army." The third day came, and the sun, looking through the white curtained valley, saw the outcasts divide their slowly decreasing store of provisions for the morning meal. It was one of the peculiarities of that mountain climate that its rays diffused a kindly warmth over the wintry landscape, as if in regretful commiseration of the past. But it revealed drift on drift of snow piled high around the hut—a hopeless, uncharted, trackless sea of white lying below the rocky shores to which the castaways still clung. Through the marvelously clear air the smoke of the pastoral village of Poker Flat rose miles away. Mother Shipton saw it and from a remote pinnacle of her rocky fastness hurled in that direction a final malediction. It was her last vituperative attempt, and perhaps for that reason was invested with a certain degree of sublimity. It did her good, she privately informed the Duchess. "Just you go out there and cuss and see." She then set herself to the task of amusing "the child," as she and the Duchess were pleased to call Piney. Piney was no chicken, but it was a soothing and original theory of the pair thus to account for the fact that she didn't swear and wasn't improper.

When night crept up again through the gorges the reedy notes of the accordion rose and fell in fitful spasms and long drawn gasps by the flickering campfire. But music failed to fill entirely the aching void left by insufficient food, and a new diversion was proposed by Piney—story telling. Neither Mr. Oakhurst nor his female companions caring to relate their personal experiences, this plan would have failed, too, but for the Innocent. Some months before he had chanced upon a stray copy of Mr. Pope's ingenious translation of the "Blind." He now proposed to narrate the principal incidents of that poem, having thoroughly mastered the argument and fairly forsother the words in the current vernacular of Sandy Bar. And so for the rest of the night the Homeric deeds of the blind beggar walked the earth. Trojan unity and Greek wrestling in the clouds of the great pines in the canyon seemed to grow to the wrath of the on of Poles. Mr. Oakhurst listened, with quiet satisfaction. Most especially he was interested in the fate of "Achilles," as the Innocent persisted in designating the "swift footed Achilles."

So with small food and much of Homer and the accordion a week passed over the heads of the outcasts. The sun again forsook them, and again from leaden skies the snowflakes were sifted over the land. Day by day closer around them drew the snowy circle until at last they looked from their prison over drifted walls of dazzling white that towered twenty feet above their heads. It became more and more difficult to replenish their fires, even from the fallen trees beside them, now half hidden in the drifts. And yet no one complained. The lovers turned from the dreary prospect and looked into each other's eyes and were happy. Mr. Oakhurst settled himself coolly to the losing game before him. The Duchess, more cheerful than she had been, assumed the care of Piney. Only Mother Shipton—once the strongest of the party—seemed to sicken and fade. At midnight on the tenth day she called Oakhurst to her side. "I'm going," she said in a voice of querulous weakness, "but don't say anything about it. Don't wake the kids. Take the bundle from under my head and open it." Mr. Oakhurst did so. It contained Mother Shipton's rations for the last week, untouched. "Give 'em to the child," she said, pointing to the sleeping Piney. "You've starved yourself," said the gambler. "That's what they call it," said the woman querulously as she lay down again and, turning her face to the wall, passed quietly away.

The accordion and the bones were put aside that day, and Homer was forgotten. When the body of Mother Shipton had been committed to the snow Mr. Oakhurst took the Innocent aside and showed him a pair of snow shoes, which he had fashioned from the old pack saddle. "There's one chance in a hundred to save her yet," he said, pointing to Piney, "but it's there," he added, pointing toward Poker Flat. "If you can reach there in two days she's safe." "And you?" asked Tom Simson. "I'll stay here," was the curt reply.

The lovers parted with a long embrace. "You are not going, too?" said the Duchess, as she saw Mr. Oakhurst apparently waiting to accompany him. "As far as the canyon," he replied. He turned suddenly and kissed the Duchess, leaving her pallid face adame and her trembling limbs rigid with amazement.

Night came, but not Mr. Oakhurst. It brought the storm again and the whirling snow. Then the Duchess, feeding the fire, found that some one had quietly piled beside the hut enough fuel to last a few days longer. The tears rose to her eyes, but she hid them from Piney.

The women slept but little. In the morning, looking into each other's faces, they read their fate. Neither spoke, but Piney, accepting the position of the stronger, drew near and placed her arm around the Duchess' waist. They kept this attitude for the rest of the day. That night the storm reached its greatest fury, and, rending asunder the protecting pines, invaded the very hut.

Toward morning they found themselves unable to feed the fire, which gradually died away. As the embers slowly blackened the Duchess crept closer to Piney and broke the silence of many hours, "Piney, can you pray?" "No, dear," said Piney simply. The Duchess, without knowing exactly why, felt relieved, and, putting her head upon Piney's shoulder, spoke no more. And so reclining, the younger and purer pillowing the head of her soiled sister upon her virgin breast, they fell asleep.

The wind lulled as if it feared to awaken them. Feathery drifts of snow, shaken from the long pine boughs, few like white winged birds and settled about them as they slept. The moon through the rifted clouds looked down upon what had been the camp. But all human stain, all trace of earthly travail, was hidden beneath the spotless mantle mercifully flung from above.

They slept all that day and the next, nor did they awaken when voices and footsteps broke the silence of the camp. And when pitying fingers brushed the snow from their wan faces you could scarcely have told from the equal peace that dwelt upon them which was she that had sinned. Even the law of Poker Flat recognized this and turned away, leaving them still locked in each other's arms.

A Scene Not in a Play.

An extraordinary scene took place in the Princess theater, London, on the night of the first production of Charles Reade's great play, "Never Too Late to Mend," Oct. 4, 1855. During the prison scene a large quantity of water was thrown over Miss Moore, who took the part of Josephs, the character done to death by the warders. One of the critics, Mr. Tomlin of the Morning Advertiser, rose from his seat and publicly protested against the unnecessary cruelty. This aroused almost a riot among the audience, and the action of the play was stopped for some considerable time. Fuel was added to the fire by George Vining, the lessee of the theater, who was playing the part of Tom Robinson and who made a most imprudent speech, in which he practically insulted every critic present, with the result that the theater was left severely alone by the press for many months. The play, however, turned out to be a popular success and had, for those days, the phenomenal run of 140 performances.

Trapped by Its Portrait.

If an old English writer be true in his observations the pheasant must be a very stupid bird, for he declares that it puts its head in the ground and thinks that all its body is then hidden. The same author says that it was also captured by another curious plan. A picture of the bird was painted on cloth and then placed in a spot where it was sure of being seen. By and by a silly pheasant coming along catches sight of the portrait and goes up to have a close view of the new neighbor. While engaged in inspecting the canvas the fowls draws near from behind and throws his net over the unwary art student.

A Human Foot Warmer.

It is interesting to learn that Julius Caesar found our Celtic ancestors just suffocating themselves with smoke. Giraldus, the early Welsh historian, describes a family as sitting around their smoky central fire by day and lying around it by night. But they could have had little comfort from it, for the same historian tells us that one of their princes eked out his fire with a human foot warmer. This officer's duty was to keep his master's feet warm by cherishing them in his bosom during meals. For this purpose he squatted under the table, and no doubt it "did him proud" so to nurse the royal moccasins.—T. P.'s London Weekly.

Popular Peanuts.

Popcorn or peanuts—which is the favorite gastronomic consolation or resource of young America in its hours of sadness or gladness? Peanuts, it seems, have a large majority of the votes, for 20,000,000 bushels of peanuts are produced annually as against only 1,000,000 bushels of popcorn. But together these delectable delicacies are headliners at the 1,000 amusement parks and 1,500 county fairs of the United States.—Exchange.

Bad News.

Small Peter, disguised as a district messenger, was delivering play telegrams to his sisters, who were improving dispatches of a more or less startling nature. When it came Lillian's turn she read aloud from her bit of yellow paper, and finely simulated walls of woe:

AMERICAN HORSES IN BATTLE

The American horse is one of the first to answer the bugle call of the European war. Representatives of many foreign governments are in his country purchasing horses for the various armies of the warring nations and practically every state in the Union is contributing cavalry material to the belligerent factions. The American horse is a utility animal and excel that of any other country on the face of the earth. He has plowed our fields, fought our battles and is the most faithful of animal kind. His reputation has extended to other countries and he is now going to perform the service for foreign countries which he has so faithfully fulfilled at home.

CO-OPERATIVE FARMING

In this age of co-operation, in which manufacturing and commercial interests have attained wonderful development and success by merging their resources, it is not to be wondered at that co-operation has slowly but inevitably wended its way into rural life. The old method of individualism is gradually giving way to the co-operative spirit and the result is a greatly reduced cost of living and lessened expense of farming.

Kentucky farmers are leading the co-operative movement and it is gradually being extended into every feature of community life.

RURAL TELEPHONES

The telephone is one of the most profitable business agencies that the farmer can employ. It affords him facilities for keeping in constant communication with the markets, provides a sitting room for the community where the families can assemble and discuss the events of the day without the inconvenience of travel or loss of time, and in sickness and emergencies, it renders a divine service.

Kentucky farmers should encourage the building of telephone lines.

PRICE OUTLOOK FOR TOBACCO

The Regie factories in France are located out of the war fields and reported running up to full capacity to furnish tobacco for the troops. Similar reports come from the German factories. The same is true in Italy and other of the European markets for Kentucky tobaccos. England's factories are furnishing the soldiers, the home markets and the colonies with no abatement in amount.

Uncertainty and its result on prices is being cleared up. Grocers were induced to buy large stocks of coffee at an advance price, because of the war, when the importing and wholesale trade knew that coffee would be one of the products to be greatly depressed in price. We were told that Kentucky's black tobaccos would have little demand. Of course the buyer would like to get the crop at former lower prices. The total consumption of tobacco in Europe should increase during the war. Especially should this be true of the class of product produced in both sections of Kentucky.

The Crimean has been the only war where tobacco was forbidden to the troops. The order was quickly rescinded. It is the universal experience that tobacco is in great demand by the fighting armies, and reports from the camps in Europe tell that the first effort of soldiers on entering a captured city is to collect all supplies of tobacco. It is the soldier's one stimulant. He fights with a pipe, a cigar or a cigarette in his mouth. Separated from tea, coffee and liquors, he wants more of tobacco. The commissaries do everything to keep the troops supplied. Prisoners and exhausted soldiers invariably beg for tobacco. Generals regard it a source of courage in the fight, and of contentment in the camp or the trench. With England supplying free tobacco to her troops, the Regie plants in France running at full pressure and similar reports from Germany, there are some very good reasons presented for good prices for the present Kentucky tobacco crop.—Lexington Herald.
